

A full year ago, in September 2023, ETHS contacted me to serve on a planning committee to celebrate 100 years of the building of the high school. What the school administrators envisioned was that members of the planning committee would include local graduates from different years, who would then urge classmates to attend.

Knowing that it takes a village, I quickly invited classmates to get involved, and so many of us jumped in to help. Soon classmates from out of town asked what we were doing for the rest of the weekend, turning our reunion into three days of schmoozing with long-lost classmates. Andi Ableman turns out to be the most organized person I know, taking the lead on finding the spectacular venue to getting orange and blue tablecloths and silver and so many other critical details. Kristin Lems provided incredible help spreading the word out to everyone and so many other ideas about what the night should look like, and taking on a variety of tasks. Doug Shaker was there for anything and everything, from creating the memorial to working with Kristin to spread the word, and in offering support whenever needed. Fred Kahn dreamed up and took charge of Friday night, which went off flawlessly, and also arranged for the fabulous State Champions banner that was with us all weekend. Neil Cohen arranged the delightful soundtrack, Kenny Walchak arranged the beverages, Jane Bannor arranged transportation, Mary Hair Graham provided the flowers. David Newman was willing to do anything and everything. Darlene Eady kept us honest and made sure we reached out broadly.

And so many people generously gave donations so we could have such an elaborate event catered by the fabulous Chef Q, who gets so much credit for making a wonderful meal that offered choices for just about any and all dietary concerns.

It was, in other words, an extraordinary outpouring of help from our class that made the event so memorable.

See you all in four years, and hopefully sooner!

When I first heard about the reunion, I realized that this was another example of a small, dedicated group of people getting together to do all the work. I live west of Denver, so I really wasn't going to be much help.

Kristin Lems asked me to take table pictures at the Saturday night event and I took more shots Sunday at the picnic. After it was all over, I had all these pictures with nowhere to put them. At the time I didn't know who half the people even were. After all, our class had 1032 students. The fun of the pictures is to see what your classmates look like now. I felt compelled to do something for the cause since all I did up to now was pay my money and show up. I've been doing photography since I took the class my senior year.

Over the years I've done a lot of web development engineering where I worked with graphic designers and got paid to take pictures. I figured this would be my contribution to the cause. So, I proceeded to collect as many pictures as I could, figure out who everyone is, and put them into a digital photo book I could give away. I managed to collect around 200 pictures. Many people are in the book multiple times because, compared to the over 1000 in the class of 1968, we only had about 50 to 100 that showed up including their spouses.

I want to thank everybody that contributed pictures. I want to especially thank Suzy Kaplan whose eagle eyes and graphics background gave me some great design insight and proofread the text. Also, I want to give thanks to Kristin Lems, who got me started on the whole project, proofread, and was very supportive.
